ORDER

20 Pending before the Court is Defendants' Motion to Dismiss certain claims by 21 Plaintiffs. (Doc. 63). Plaintiffs have filed a Response (Doc. 68), and Defendants have 22 filed a Reply (Doc. 69).

23 I. BACKGROUND

24 On November 24, 2009, Dana Seawright ("Dana") was committed to the Arizona 25 Department of Corrections ("ADOC") to serve a twelve year sentence related to various 26 felony charges. (Doc. 63 at 2). On July 2, 2010, Dana was housed at the Stiner Unit on 27 Housing Unit 2-F Run, at Arizona State Prison Complex-Lewis (ASPC-Lewis). (Id.) On 28 that day, gang leaders at ASPC-Lewis ordered Dana to seriously harm another inmate at 1 ASPC-Lewis and Dana refused to comply with the order. (Doc. 53 at 4).

2 On July 3, 2010, Dana was moved to Housing Unit 2-D Run. (Id.) In apparent 3 retaliation for refusing gang leader's orders, on the morning of July 3, 2010, at some 4 point between 07:22 and 07:56 a.m., Dana was beaten and stabbed by fellow inmates and 5 left in his cell. (Id. at 5-6). The housing unit where Dana was housed and where he was 6 beaten was unsupervised during this time period. (Id.) An officer found Dana in his bed, 7 unconscious, lying face down and bleeding at 07:56 a.m. (Id. at 6). At approximately 8 08:06 a.m., Dana received medical attention for the first time. (Id. at 8). Buckeye, 9 Arizona, Paramedics were called to the scene and made the determination that Dana 10 needed to be transported via helicopter to St. Joseph's Hospital in Phoenix, a Level 1 11 Trauma Unit. (Id.) At 10:00 a.m., Dana was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital. (Id.)
12 Dana never regained consciousness following the beating. (Id.) On July 7, 2010, Dana 13 was removed from life support systems and died. (Id. at 9). The cause of death was 14 blunt force trauma to Dana's head. (Id.)

15 Plaintiffs are the Estate of Dana Seawright (the "Estate") and Kini Seawright.
16 Kini Seawright is the mother of Dana. Plaintiffs originally filed a complaint on June 30, 17 2011. (Doc. 1). On October 12, 2011, Plaintiffs filed a First Amended Complaint. (Doc.
18 19). On June 18, 2012, Plaintiffs filed the Second Amended Complaint at issue. (Doc.
19 53). Plaintiffs' Second Amended Complaint (the "Complaint") brought this action 20 against various Defendants including, the State of Arizona, Charles L. Ryan, the Director
21 of the ADOC, and individual Corrections Officers that were on duty in Housing Unit 2-D 22 Run when Dana was beaten. (Id. at 1). In the Complaint, Plaintiffs allege five counts 23 against Defendants. (Id. at 9-22). Defendants filed the pending Motion to Dismiss on 24 August 7, 2012. (Doc. 63).

25 II. DISCUSSION

26 In Defendants' Motion to Dismiss, Defendant Charles L. Ryan ("Ryan") has 27 moved to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims against him in the Complaint under Federal Rule of 28 Civil Procedure 12(b), for failure to sufficiently plead a cause of action against Ryan.

1 (Doc. 63 at 1). Additionally, Defendants have moved to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims for 2 punitive damages for state law claims, Plaintiffs' claims for pain and suffering under 42 3 U.S.C. § 1983 ("§ 1983"), the Estate's claim for tort or statutory damages, and the 4 Estate's ability to maintain any claims due to lack of representation. (Id. at 11-15).

5 The Court may dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim under Federal Rule 6 of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for two reasons: 1) lack of a cognizable legal theory and 2) 7 insufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory. Balistreri v. Pacifica Police 8 Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990).

9 To survive a 12(b)(6) motion for failure to state a claim, a complaint must meet 10 the requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2). Rule 8(a)(2) requires a 11 "short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief," so 12 that the defendant has "fair notice of what the . . . claim is and the grounds upon which it 13 rests." Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007)(quoting Conley v.
14 Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47 (1957)).

15 Although a complaint attacked for failure to state a claim does not need detailed 16 factual allegations, the pleader's obligation to provide the grounds for relief requires 17 "more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause 18 of action will not do." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (internal citations omitted). The factual 19 allegations of the complaint must be sufficient to raise a right to relief above a 20 speculative level. Id. Rule 8(a)(2) "requires a 'showing,' rather than a blanket assertion, 21 of entitlement to relief. Without some factual allegation in the complaint, it is hard to see 22 how a claimant could satisfy the requirement of providing not only 'fair notice' of the 23 nature of the claim, but also 'grounds' on which the claim rests." Id. (citing 5 C. Wright 24 & A. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure §1202, pp. 94-95 (3d ed. 2004)).

25 Rule 8's pleading standard demands more than "an unadorned, the defendant-26 unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009)(citing 27 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). A complaint that offers nothing more than naked assertions 28 will not suffice. To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient

1 factual matter, which, if accepted as true, states a claim to relief that is “plausible on its 2 face.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. Facial plausibility exists if the pleader pleads factual 3 content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable 4 for the misconduct alleged. Id. Plausibility does not equal “probability,” but plausibility 5 requires more than a sheer possibility that a defendant acted unlawfully. Id. “Where a 6 complaint pleads facts that are ‘merely consistent’ with a defendant’s liability, it ‘stops 7 short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief.’” Id. (citing 8 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557).

9 In deciding a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), a court must construe the 10 facts alleged in the complaint in the light most favorable to the drafter of the complaint 11 and the court must accept all well-pleaded factual allegations as true. See Shwarz v.
12 United States, 234 F.3d 428, 435 (9th Cir. 2000). Nonetheless, courts do not have to 13 accept as true a legal conclusion couched as a factual allegation. Papasan v. Allain, 478
14 U.S. 265, 286 (1986).

15 A. Representation for the Estate

16 The Court initially addresses Defendants’ motion to dismiss the Estate’s claims 17 because no personal representative for the Estate has been appointed. Defendants argue 18 that Plaintiffs’ Second Amended Complaint should be dismissed because Kini Seawright 19 has not been appointed the personal representative for the Estate and therefore cannot 20 maintain any claims on behalf of the Estate. (Doc. 63 at 11). In their Response, 21 Plaintiffs argued that Kini Seawright would soon be formally appointed as a personal 22 representative of the Estate, and requests the Court allow the Estate to move forward with 23 its claims. (Doc. 68 at 5). In their Reply, Defendants stated that if Kini Seawright was 24 properly appointed as the personal representative then Defendants would withdraw this 25 argument from their Motion to Dismiss. (Doc. 69 at 8).

26 On November 6, 2012, Plaintiffs filed a Notice of Appointment with the Court 27 showing that Kini Seawright had been appointed the personal representative of the Estate 28 by the Maricopa County Superior Court. (Doc. 70). Accordingly, the Court denies this 1 part of Defendants' Motion to Dismiss because it is moot.

2 B. § 1983 Claims Against Defendant Ryan

3 Next Defendants argue that the Court should dismiss the two claims against Ryan.
 4 (Doc. 63 at 4). Plaintiffs have made two § 1983 claims against Ryan in Counts One and 5 Two of the Complaint. (Doc. 53 at 9, 12). Section 1983 is not a source of substantive 6 rights on its own. Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 393 (1989). Section 1983 "merely 7 provides 'a method for vindicating federal rights elsewhere conferred.'" Id. at 394 8 (quoting Baker v. McCollan, 443 U.S. 137, 144, n. 3 (1979)). "To make out a cause of 9 action under section 1983, plaintiffs must plead that (1) the defendants acting under color 10 of state law (2) deprived plaintiffs of rights secured by the Constitution or federal 11 statutes." Gibson v. United States, 781 F.2d 1334, 1338 (9th Cir. 1986) (citing Smith v.
 12 Cremens, 308 F.2d 187, 190 (9th Cir. 1962)). "The first inquiry in any § 1983 suit" is "to 13 isolate the precise constitutional violation with which [the defendant] is charged." Baker, 14 443 U.S. at 140.

15 1. Count One

16 Count One alleges all individual Defendants, including Ryan, violated § 1983 by 17 depriving Dana of his Constitutional rights under the Fourth and Eighth Amendments by 18 deliberate indifference to Dana's health, safety, and medical needs through their policies, 19 practices, and procedures. (Doc. 53 at 9-12). Plaintiffs have fulfilled their first 20 requirement for a § 1983 claim against Ryan by alleging that Ryan was acting under the 21 color of state law as the Director of ADOC. (Doc. 53 at 2, 9).

22 The Court must now determine if Plaintiffs have alleged enough "factual matter" 23 to show that Ryan "plausibly" deprived Dana of his Constitutional rights guaranteed by 24 the Fourth and Eighth Amendments. See Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. Plaintiffs argue that 25 Dana had the right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment and free from excessive 26 force by or authorized by police officers. (Doc. 53 at 11 ¶ 61). The Eighth Amendment 27 protects against cruel and unusual punishment. See U.S. Const. amend. VIII. The Fourth 28 Amendment protects arrestees and pretrial detainees against the use of excessive force by 1 or authorized by police officers. See Graham, 490 U.S. at 395.

2 In Graham v. Conner, the Supreme Court established a timeline, from prior to 3 arrest through conviction, for the proper constitutional analysis of claims of excessive 4 force. Id. at 395 n. 10. “After conviction, the Eighth Amendment ‘serves as the primary 5 source of substantive protection . . . in cases . . . where the deliberate use of force is 6 challenged as excessive and unjustified.’” Id. (quoting Whitley v. Albers, 475 U.S. 312, 7 327 (1986)).

8 Dana was neither an arrestee nor a pretrial detainee at the time of the allegations 9 in Counts One. Dana’s claims arose after his conviction. Consequently, the Court must 10 dismiss Plaintiffs’ Fourth Amendment claim in Count One for failure to state a claim 11 upon which relief can be granted.

12 Turning to Plaintiffs’ other claims in Count One, “the treatment a prisoner 13 receives in prison and the conditions under which he is confined are subject to scrutiny 14 under the Eighth Amendment.” Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 832-33 (1994) (citing 15 Helling v. McKinney, 509 U.S. 25, 31 (1993)). The Eighth Amendment imposes “duties 16 on [prison] officials, who must provide humane conditions of confinement; prison 17 officials must ensure that inmates receive adequate food, clothing, shelter, and medical 18 care, and must ‘take reasonable measures to guarantee the safety of the inmates.’” Id.
19 (quoting Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 526–527 (1984)). “In particular, as the lower 20 courts have uniformly held, and as we have assumed, ‘prison officials have a duty . . . to 21 protect prisoners from violence at the hands of other prisoners.’” Id. (quoting Cortes–
22 Quinones v. Jimenez–Nettleship, 842 F.2d 556, 558 (1st Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 488 23 U.S. 823 (1988)).

24 It is not, however, every injury suffered by one prisoner at 25 the hands of another that translates into constitutional liability 26 for prison officials responsible for the victim’s safety. Our 27 cases have held that a prison official violates the Eighth 28 Amendment only when two requirements are met. First, the deprivation alleged must be, objectively, sufficiently serious, a prison official’s act or omission must result in the denial of the 1 minimal civilized measure of life's necessities. For a claim 2 (like the one here) based on a failure to prevent harm, the 3 inmate must show that he is incarcerated under conditions posing a substantial risk of serious harm.

4 The second requirement follows from the principle that 5 only the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain implicates 6 the Eighth Amendment. To violate the Cruel and Unusual 7 Punishments Clause, a prison official must have a sufficiently 8 culpable state of mind. In prison-conditions cases that state of mind is one of deliberate indifference to inmate health or safety.

9 Id. at 834 (internal quotations and citations omitted).

10 Accordingly, Plaintiffs must objectively show that Ryan's actions deprived Dana 11 of something "sufficiently serious." See Thomas v. Ponder, 611 F.3d 1144, 1150 (9th 12 Cir. 2010) (quoting Farmer, 511 U.S. at 834). The facts clearly show Dana was killed by 13 a savage attack at the hands of other inmates. Plaintiffs allege this was the result of 14 Ryan's actions. (Doc. 53 at 11). The Court finds this more than qualifies as sufficiently 15 serious.

16 Plaintiffs, however, must "make a subjective showing that the deprivation 17 occurred with deliberate indifference to [Dana's] health or safety." Thomas, 611 F.3d at 18 1150 (quoting Foster v. Runnels, 554 F.3d 807 (9th Cir. 2009)). This subjective showing 19 is done by proving Ryan had the requisite culpable state of mind. As the Farmer Court 20 explained, that state of mind is proven by showing Ryan was deliberately indifferent to 21 Dana's health and safety.

22 Plaintiffs have made the claim that Ryan was deliberately indifferent to Dana's 23 safety. (Doc. 53 at 9). But Plaintiffs must give "more than labels and conclusions."
24 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555. In Farmer, the Supreme Court established a test for deliberate 25 indifference in order to determine if a prison official had violated an inmate's rights 26 under the Eighth Amendment. The Supreme Court explained that,

27 a prison official cannot be found liable under the Eighth 28 Amendment for denying an inmate humane conditions of 1 confinement unless the official knows of and disregards an 2 excessive risk to inmate health or safety; the official must both 3 be aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn 4 that a substantial risk of serious harm exists, and he must also 5 draw the inference. . . . But an official's failure to alleviate a 6 significant risk that he should have perceived but did not, while no cause for commendation, cannot under our cases be condemned as the infliction of punishment.

7 Farmer, 511 U.S. at 837.

8 In applying this explanation from Farmer, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has 9 employed a two part inquiry to determine deliberate indifference. As the Court of 10 Appeals explained,

11 First, the inmate must show that the prison officials were 12 aware of a "substantial risk of serious harm" to an inmate's 13 health or safety. Farmer, 511 U.S. at 837. This part of our 14 inquiry may be satisfied if the inmate shows that the risk 15 posed by the deprivation is obvious. See id. at 842 ("[A] 16 factfinder may conclude that a prison official knew of a 17 substantial risk [to a prisoner's health] from the very fact that 18 the risk was obvious."). Second, the inmate must show that 19 the prison officials had no "reasonable" justification for the deprivation, in spite of that risk. See id. at 844 ("[P]rison officials who actually knew of a substantial risk to inmate health or safety may be found free from liability if they responded reasonably.").

20 Thomas, 611 F.3d at 1150-51 (footnotes omitted). Consequently, the Court looks to 21 whether Plaintiffs alleged facts to show Ryan was subjectively aware of the substantial 22 risk of serious harm to Dana on the morning of July 3, 2010. If Ryan was aware of the 23 substantial risk, the Court will then look to whether Ryan had a reasonable justification 24 for not acting to mitigate that risk.

25 Defendants argue that Plaintiffs' Second Amended Complaint alleges no facts that 26 address any issues concerning Ryan's deliberate indifference to inmate on inmate 27 violence. (Doc. 63 at 5). Plaintiffs devote one sentence in their Response to showing 28 how their Second Amended Complaint alleges facts that Ryan was deliberately

1 indifferent. Plaintiffs merely state, the “Second Amended Complaint alleges seven pages 2 and fifty (50) paragraphs solely devoted to specific allegations of Ryan’s knowledge of an 3 deliberate indifference to the unconstitutional acts committed by his staff against ASPC 4 inmates.” (Doc. 68 at 3) (emphasis in original). The rest of Plaintiffs’ Response to this 5 issue is devoted to proving that deliberate indifference is the test to determine if a 6 supervisor is liable for violating the Constitutional rights of an inmate. (Id. at 3-5). On 7 this point the Court agrees with Plaintiffs—deliberate indifference is the test. The central 8 question, however, is how deliberate indifference is determined and whether the 9 allegations against Ryan fulfill this determination.

10 The Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals clearly explained how 11 deliberate indifference is determined in Farmer and Thomas. Consequently, the Court is 12 left to cull Plaintiffs’ “seven pages and fifty (50) paragraphs” of allegations to determine 13 if Plaintiffs have shown Ryan was aware of the substantial risk of serious harm to Dana.
14 Plaintiffs “may establish [Ryan’s] awareness by reliance on any relevant evidence.” 15 Farmer, 511 U.S. at 848. But, Plaintiffs must demonstrate that Ryan was plausibly aware 16 of a substantial risk to Dana and not just possibly aware.

17 Viewing the allegations in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, Plaintiffs fail to 18 state a single fact establishing that Ryan was aware of a substantial risk of serious harm 19 to Dana on the morning of July 3, 2010. Plaintiffs’ statement of facts begins on page 4 of 20 the Second Amended Complaint. Allegations 20-57 are pertinent to all Plaintiffs’ claims 21 for relief. (Doc. 53 at 4). Not a single one of these allegations mentions Ryan or could 22 be construed to imply that Ryan was aware of what was happening at ASPC-Lewis. Nor 23 do any of these allegations show that Ryan’s actions or deprivations made substantial 24 risks of serious harm to Dana obvious to Ryan.

25 Plaintiffs include Ryan in Count One of their claims for relief. (Id. at 9).
26 Allegations 58-69 support Count One. However, the allegations that concern Ryan here 27 are nothing more than a series of conclusory statements and repeated accusations against 28 him. Even the parts that mention Ryan by name, allegations 60, 63, 64, 65, and 68, are 1 conclusions couched as factual allegations with respect to Ryan. By way of example, 2 Plaintiffs' allegations include statements like, "all individual Defendants herein, . . .

3 RYAN, . . . demonstrated deliberate indifference . . . through their policies, practices, and 4 procedures, including," "[k]nowing in advance of the planned 'beat down,'" and 5 "[f]ailing to properly train COs . . ." (Id. at 9-10 ¶ 60). Further, Plaintiffs claim, "official 6 policies, procedures, longstanding customs and practices of Defendants RYAN . . . , 7 evinced a deliberate indifference to constitutional rights. This indifference was 8 manifested by the failure to change, correct, or revoke or rescind said policies, 9 procedures, customs and practices before DANA was beaten and left for dead." (Id. at 12 10 ¶ 68). These are conclusions. These are not specific facts that sufficiently allege that 11 Ryan plausibly deprived Dana of his constitutional rights.

12 Plaintiffs allege three different times, in allegations 60, 62, and 67, that 13 Defendants knew the beating was going to take place and allowed it to happen but make 14 no allegation that Ryan himself knew, who told him, or how he came by the information.
15 None of these allegations can be reasonably intended to imply that Ryan, himself, 16 actually knew the beating was going to take place. Further, these allegations against 17 Ryan, that he knew of the beat down, are clearly contradicted by allegation 22, where 18 Plaintiffs state only "ADC Corrections Officers and their supervisor working in the Stiner 19 Unit . . . were informed and knew that Dana was going to get a 'beat-down' the morning 20 of July 3, 2010." (Id. at 4 ¶ 22). There is no mention of Ryan in this factual allegation.

21 Plaintiffs do allege that Defendants, including Ryan were deliberately indifferent 22 for failing to adequately staff all housing units and collapsing the units. (Id. at 10 ¶ 60).
23 Plaintiffs, however, have not shown that Ryan knew of this deprivation or that a 24 substantial risk of serious harm was or should have been obvious to Ryan by this 25 deprivation. These deficiencies are indicative of the rest of the allegations Plaintiffs 26 made in Count One.

27 Given the totality of the allegations in Count One, Plaintiffs have not made the 28 first claim for relief against Ryan, that he violated Dana's Eighth Amendment rights, 1 plausible on its face. Therefore, the Court dismisses Count One against Ryan.

2 2. Count Two

3 Count Two alleges Ryan, among other supervisors, violated § 1983 by breaching 4 his duty of “Supervisor Responsibility” and violating the rights of inmates under his care, 5 guaranteed by the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments. (Doc. 53 at 12-19). Plaintiffs 6 allege Ryan acted with deliberate indifference to the health and safety of inmates at all 7 the jails he supervised in violation of their constitutional rights. (Id. at 13). Count Two is 8 expressly based on Ryan’s alleged violation of inmates’ rights secured by the Fourth and 9 Fourteenth Amendments. (Doc. 53 at 13 ¶ 71).

10 Plaintiffs have not explained what part of the Fourth Amendment Ryan has 11 allegedly violated in Count Two. In analyzing Plaintiffs’ claim, the only possible 12 application of the Fourth Amendment the Court sees is the protection against the use of 13 excessive force by or authorized by police officers, the same claim Plaintiffs made in 14 Count One. “In addressing an excessive force claim brought under § 1983, analysis 15 begins by identifying the specific constitutional right allegedly infringed by the 16 challenged application of force.” Graham, 490 U.S. at 394 (citing Baker, 443 U.S. at 17 140). However, as the Court explained, this Fourth Amendment protection is for free 18 citizens in the process of arrest from the excessive use of force by government actors.
19 See id. at 395 n. 10. Dana and the inmates at the center of Plaintiffs’ claim in Count Two 20 were not free citizens when the allegations occurred, they were incarcerated. “Since 21 [neither Dana nor the inmates were] pre-trial detainee[s] at the time, Plaintiffs cannot 22 assert a Fourth Amendment claim, rather, it is the Eighth Amendment that is implicated 23 in excessive force claims by a convicted prisoner.” Dennis v. Thurman, 959 F. Supp.
24 1253, 1264 n. 1 (C.D. Cal. 1997) (citing Graham, 490 U.S. at 393-95 n. 10). Plaintiffs 25 have not alleged Ryan violated the Eighth Amendment rights of inmates in Count Two.
26 Accordingly, the Court dismisses Plaintiffs’ Fourth Amendment claim against Ryan in 27 Count Two for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. The Court is left 28 with determining if Ryan violated the Fourteenth Amendment rights of inmates.

1 Similar to Plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment claim, Plaintiffs have not explained how 2 the Fourteenth Amendment was violated by Ryan in Count Two. The Fourteenth 3 Amendment guarantees more than a single right that the Court can automatically look to 4 in this case. Pertinent to this case, "[t]he [Supreme] Court has held that the Fourteenth 5 Amendment guarantees against infringement by the States the liberties of . . . the Fourth
6 Amendment, . . . , [and] the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual 7 punishments, . . ." Pointer v. Texas, 380 U.S. 400, 411-12 (1965) (emphasis added). In 8 addition, the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees additional 9 rights under substantive due process. This is where the Fourteenth Amendment protects 10 individuals from "arbitrary action of government" and conduct that "shocks the 11 conscience." County of Sacramento v. Lewis, 523 U.S. 833, 846 (1998) (internal 12 citations omitted).

13 Plaintiffs have not explained in their Second Amended Complaint, nor in their 14 Reply, which analysis they want the Court to apply. For a § 1983 claim, the specific 15 constitutional right allegedly infringed must be identified. See Graham, 490 U.S. at 394
16 (citing Baker, 443 U.S. at 140). "Dismissal can be based on the lack of a cognizable 17 legal theory or the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory." 18 Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1990) (quoting Robertson 19 v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 749 F.2d 530, 533-534 (9th Cir. 1984)).

20 By the wording of Count Two, where Plaintiffs state "[t]his action is brought 21 pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments . . . ," it would 22 appear that Plaintiffs are alleging Ryan violated inmate's Fourth Amendment rights 23 guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment. (Doc. 53 at 13 ¶ 71). If this in fact is what 24 Plaintiffs intended to plead, as explained by the Court, the Fourteenth Amendment claim 25 against Ryan should be dismissed because the Fourth Amendment does not apply to 26 Count Two.

27 If Plaintiffs intended for their claim to be under the substantive due process rights 28 guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment, their claim did not give Defendant fair notice

1 of what the claim was and the grounds upon which it rested. See Twombly, 550 U.S. at 2 555. This is evinced by the fact that no party addressed substantive due process claims in 3 their pleadings.

4 Consequently, the Court dismisses Plaintiffs claims against Ryan in Count Two 5 for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

6 C. § 1983 Claims for Pain and Suffering

7 Related to Plaintiffs' § 1983 claims under Counts One and Two, are Plaintiffs' 8 claims to recover damages for Dana's pre-death pain and suffering. (Doc. 53 at 22 ¶ C).
 9 Defendants contend that such damages cannot be recovered by either Plaintiff under their 10 § 1983 claims. (Doc. 63 at 12).

11 1. Estate's § 1983 Claims Seeking Pain and Suffering

12 As one of the named Plaintiffs, Dana's Estate is seeking damages for Dana's pre-13 death pain and suffering. A different judge in this Court has thoroughly addressed this 14 very issue. In Gotbaum v. City of Phoenix, 617 F.Supp.2d 878 (D. Ariz. 2008), this Court 15 put § 1983 in context and explained,

16 Section 1983 was enacted after the Civil War to remedy 17 widespread violations of civil rights in the South. The statute 18 creates a civil cause of action for any person whose federal 19 rights have been deprived by a person acting under color of 20 law. 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The statute does not, however, 21 specify the remedies available to such a person, nor does it 22 address whether the cause of action survives the death of the 23 injured person. Id. Congress instead has directed courts to 24 "turn to 'the common law, as modified and changed by the 25 constitution and statutes of the [forum] State,' as long as these 26 are 'not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the 27 United States.'" Robertson v. Wegmann, 436 U.S. 584, 588, 28 98 S.Ct. 1991, 56 L.Ed.2d 554 (1978) (quoting 42 U.S.C. § 1988). Courts thus look to forum state statutes for the remedies available under section 1983. Id. at 589, 98 S.Ct.
 1991. In doing so, however, courts must confirm that the forum state remedies comport with the Constitution and laws of the United States. "Of particular importance is whether application of state law 'would be inconsistent with the federal policy underlying the cause of action under consideration” — in this case, section 1983. Id. at 590, 98 S.Ct. 1991 (quoting Johnson v. Ry. Express Agency, Inc., 421 U.S. 454, 465, 95

 S.Ct. 1716, 44 L.Ed.2d 295 (1975)).

617 F. Supp. 2d at 882-83. The court in Gotbaum found Arizona’s survival statute, A.R.S. § 14-3110, was the most closely analogous state law to provide a remedy for a § 1983 claim by the decedent’s estate. Id. at 883. Arizona’s survival statute bars a decedent’s estate from recovering for a decedent’s pain and suffering. See A.R.S. § 14-3110. The court was then tasked with determining whether Arizona’s survival statute was consistent with the federal policy underlying § 1983 and specifically whether damages for the decedent’s pre-death pain and suffering were also barred in a § 1983 claim in Arizona. The court determined that damages for pre-death pain and suffering should not be barred in a § 1983 claim. Id. at 885.

Gotbaum acknowledged that the Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals have not decided the question of whether a survival statute barring recovery for the decedent’s pain and suffering was consistent with the federal policy behind § 1983.
Gotbaum, 617 F.Supp.2d at 884. However, the court in Gotbaum recognized that a majority of federal cases had concluded “that when a violation of federal civil rights results in death of the victim, state statutes limiting the remedies of the victim’s estate and family members are not consistent with the purposes of section 1983.” Id. (citing Berry v. City of Muskogee, 900 F.2d 1489, 1499-1507 (10th Cir. 1990); Bass by Lewis v.
Wallenstein, 769 F.2d 1173, 1187-90 (7th Cir. 1985); Jaco v. Bloechle, 739 F.2d 239, 241-45 (6th Cir. 1984); Gilbaugh v. Balzer, No. Civ-99-1576-AS, 2001 WL 34041889, at *5-7 (D.Or. June 7, 2001); Garcia v. Whitehead, 961 F.Supp. 230, 232-33 (C.D. Cal.
 1997); Guyton v. Phillips, 532 F.Supp. 1154, 1164-66 (N.D. Cal. 1981)).

Gotbaum reached the same conclusion as the majority of other federal cases and explained,

The legislative history of section 1983 makes clear that “Congress intended significant recompense when a

1 constitutional violation caused the death of the victim. The 2 general legislative history of the 1871 act makes clear that 3 death was among the civil rights violations that Congress 4 intended to remedy.” Berry, 900 F.2d at 1501. . . . “[I]n both 5 Houses [of Congress], statements of the supporters of [section 6 1983] corroborated that Congress . . . intended to give a broad 7 remedy for violations of federally protected civil rights.”
 8 Monell v. Dep’t of Soc. Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 685, 98 S.Ct.
 9 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611 (1978). . . . The Supreme Court has 10 noted that section 1983’s “unique remedy make[s] it 11 appropriate to accord the statute ‘a sweep as broad as its 12 language.’” Wilson v. Garcia, 471 U.S. 261, 272, 105 S.Ct.
 13 1938, 85 L.Ed.2d 254 (1985) (quoting United States v. Price, 14 383 U.S. 787, 801, 86 S.Ct. 1152, 16 L.Ed.2d 267 (1966)), 15 superseded by statute on other grounds, 28 U.S.C. § 1658(a).

16 Most courts have concluded that state statutes limiting 17 civil remedies in cases where a constitutional violation has 18 caused death to the victim simply are not consistent with the 19 purposes of section 1983. Courts have noted that state laws 20 “are not suitable to carry out the full effects intended for § 21 1983 cases ending in death of the victim; they are deficient in 22 some respects to punish the offenses.” Berry, 900 F.2d at 23 1506. Courts have also noted the incongruity of applying a 24 state law that would allow recovery for pain and suffering if 25 the victim survived the assault, but not if the victim died as a 26 result of it. . . . Courts have also noted the ever-changing 27 patchwork of state survival and wrongful death statutes and 28 the fact that adopting them will result in different section 1983 remedies in different states, and differences even within a single state depending on the nature of the cases . . .

the Supreme Court has not addressed this question. The Supreme Court did apply a state survival statute to a section 1983 claim in Robertson, even though the state statute eliminated the claim after the victim died for reasons unrelated to the violation of his federal rights. 436 U.S. at 590-94, 98 S.Ct. 1991. But the Supreme Court specifically noted that its decision was narrow and did not necessarily apply to cases where the civil rights violation caused the death of the victim .

Id. at 884-85. The court then concluded that, “[g]iven the broad intent of section 1983,

1 and particularly the fact that Congress sought to provide an effective remedy for 2 unconstitutional killings,” the Arizona survival statute’s elimination of pain and suffering 3 damages in cases where death is alleged would be contrary to the purposes of § 1983. Id.
4 at 885.

5 In this case, Defendants argue that Arizona’s survival statute is consistent with § 6 1983’s goal of awarding compensation to the party actually injured and that this Court 7 should apply the survival statute as it stands, barring the Estate’s recovery for pre-death 8 pain and suffering. (Doc. 63 at 13). Defendants invite this Court to adopt the reasoning 9 used in Venerable v. City of Sacramento, 185 F. Supp. 2d 1128, 1133 (E.D. Cal. 2002), 10 and Cardinal v. Bushnoff, No. 06cv72, 2010 WL 1337489, at *2 (S.D. Cal. April 5, 2010) 11 (both courts holding that state law barring an award of pre-death pain and suffering to the 12 estate of a decedent was not inconsistent with a § 1983 claim and therefore state law 13 should be applied unchanged).

14 This Court finds the opinion in Venerable v. City of Sacramento both logical and 15 convincing and the Court is persuaded to agree with that opinion’s conclusion. However, 16 the Court is persuaded that when faced with this question, the Ninth Circuit Court of 17 Appeals will ultimately side with the result and reasoning in Gotbaum and a majority of 18 other federal courts. Accordingly, to remain consistent with the intent of § 1983, Dana’s 19 Estate should not be barred from recovering for Dana’s pre-death pain and suffering by 20 applying A.R.S. § 14-3110. Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss the Estate’s § 1983 claims 21 for pain and suffering is denied.

22 2. Kini Seawright’s § 1983 Claims Seeking Pain and Suffering

23 As the other named Plaintiff, Kini Seawright is also seeking damages for Dana’s 24 pre-death pain and suffering on her two § 1983 claims (Counts One and Two).
25 Defendants argue that in order to bring this claim, Plaintiffs must meet the requirements 26 to prove a substantive due process violation and show that Defendants’ conduct “shocks 27 the conscience.” (Doc. 63 at 14). The Court grants this part of Defendants’ motion to 28 dismiss. However, the Court need not and will not address Defendants’ arguments

1 because they completely miss the mark and are irrelevant to why Kini Seawright cannot 2 seek damages for Dana's pre-death pain and suffering on her § 1983 claims. Kini 3 Seawright, in her individual capacity as Dana's mother, cannot seek damages for her 4 son's pre-death pain and suffering because she must bring a wrongful death claim under § 5 1983, not a survival claim.

6 As explained in Gotbaum, § 1983 merely "creates a civil cause of action for any 7 person whose federal rights have been deprived by a person acting under color of law.
8 The statute does not, however, specify the remedies available to such a person, nor does it 9 address whether the cause of action survives the death of the injured person." 617 F.
10 Supp. 2d at 882 (internal citations omitted). The remedies of a § 1983 claim and whether 11 the cause of action survives the death of the decedent come from the laws of the forum 12 state, as long as these laws are consistent with the laws of the United States and the 13 policy underlying § 1983. Id. at 883.

14 As discussed above, Arizona's survival statute, A.R.S. § 14-3110, is the most 15 closely analogous state law to provide a remedy for a § 1983 claim by the decedent's
16 estate. However, the most closely analogous state law to provide a remedy for a § 1983 17 claim by the decedent's parent is Arizona's wrongful death statute, A.R.S. § 12-611.

18 A wrongful death claim and a survival claim are separate claims arising from the 19 same incident. Barragan v. Superior Court of Pima County, 470 P.2d 722, 724 (Ariz. Ct.
20 App. 1970) (holding that a claim under the survival statute permits recovery for the 21 wrong to the injured person, and the wrongful death statute confines recovery to the loss 22 suffered by the beneficiaries). The survival statute provides for recovery of damages 23 sustained by the decedent from the time of injury until his death. Id. The claim passes 24 from the decedent to the personal representative, and becomes an asset of the estate. Id.
25 The purpose of the survival statute is "to prevent the tortfeasor's liability from ceasing 26 upon the injured person's death." Id. The survival statute, A.R.S. § 14-3110, does not 27 create a new claim, but rather allows the personal representative to enforce the decedent's 28 claim. Id. While the survival statute explicitly bars recovery by the estate for the

1 decedent's pre-death pain and suffering, as discussed above, to do so in a § 1983 claim 2 would be inconsistent with the intent of § 1983.

3 A wrongful death claim, on the other hand, is neither a continuation of the 4 decedent's claim, nor a continuation of the survival claim under A.R.S. § 14-3110. Id. A 5 wrongful death claim compensates statutory beneficiaries for their injuries, such as loss 6 of companionship, as opposed to a survival claim which compensates the decedent's 7 estate. Id. The damages available in a wrongful death action do not include damages for 8 injury to the decedent, such as the decedent's pain and suffering. "In an action for 9 wrongful death, the jury shall give such damages as it deems fair and with just reference 10 to the injury . . . to the surviving parties who may be entitled to recover." A.R.S. § 12-11 613. In other words, the damages are for the injury to the party bringing the wrongful 12 death claim, such as a parent.

13 Consequently, the damages Kini Seawright seeks must be for injury to her, not for 14 injury to her son. Dana's pre-death pain and suffering is an injury to him, properly 15 sought here by Dana's estate under § 1983. Dana's mother cannot also seek damages for 16 Dana's pain and suffering on her wrongful death claim under § 1983. Therefore, 17 Defendants' Motion to Dismiss Kini Seawright's § 1983 claims for Dana's pain and 18 suffering is granted.

19 D. Estate's Claim for Tort and Statutory Damages

20 Defendants argue that the Estate's claim for tort and statutory damages should be 21 dismissed because they are not recoverable. (Doc. 63 at 14). The Estate demands relief 22 in the form of lost wages, income, medical expenses and all other economic losses, and 23 general damages. (Doc. 53 at 22 ¶ B-C). Plaintiffs concede that the "Estate does not 24 have state law/gross negligence claims to assert." (Doc. 68 at 7). Accordingly, the 25 Court grants Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the Estate's claims for tort and statutory 26 damages.

27 E. Punitive Damages for State Law Claims

28 Defendants argue that punitive damages cannot be awarded against the State of 1 Arizona under a state law claim. (Doc. 63 at 14-15) (citing A.R.S. § 12-820.04).

2 Plaintiffs seek punitive damages under their state law claims against the State of Arizona
3 in Counts Three, Four, and Five. (Doc. 53 at 19-22). Plaintiffs concede Defendants 4 argument and admit that punitive damages are not available against the State. (Doc. 68 at 5 7). Therefore, the Court grants Defendants' Motion to Dismiss the Plaintiffs' claims for 6 punitive damages against the State of Arizona in Counts Three, Four, and Five.

7 III. CONCLUSION

8 Based on the foregoing,

9 IT IS ORDERED Defendants' Motion to Dismiss is granted in part and denied in 10 part. (Doc. 63). Specifically, the Court denies Defendants' motion to dismiss all § 1983 11 claims against all Defendants because no personal representative for the Estate has been 12 appointed. The Court grants Defendants' motion to dismiss Count One and Count Two 13 against Defendant Charles L. Ryan. The Court denies Defendants' motion to dismiss the 14 Estate's § 1983 claims for pain and suffering. The Court grants Defendants' motion to 15 dismiss Kini Seawright's § 1983 claims for pain and suffering. The Court grants 16 Defendants' motion to dismiss the Estate's claim for tort and statutory damages. Finally, 17 the Court grants Defendants' motion to dismiss punitive damages against the State of 18 Arizona on Counts Three, Four, and Five.
